How Ollie Keeps Teens (and Parents) Safe

Ollie was built with the help of child privacy and safety experts. We provide the tools to make teen networking safer and more effective, but safety is ultimately dependent on the diligence of every teen and parent who uses Ollie. Here's how we give you the tools to stay safe.

1. Individual accounts are limited to teens and parents.
2. Teens must enroll with a parent or guardian. Parents must authorize their teen before the teen's profile becomes public and he or she starts communicating with others on the network. We also require a subscription fee to be paid by credit card.
3. Parents have access to their teen's dashboard. They can edit their teen's profile at any time and can post events on their teen's calendar. Job status, messages, and reviews can all be viewed by the parent through the parent's own dashboard.
4. We never publish the last name of a teen, their home address, email address, phone number, or other personal information, and we strongly encourage teens to keep this information private as well—not just on Ollie, but everywhere they go online.
5. We do not use geo-location or geo-tracking. We do not sell any personal information to third parties for any purpose, including behaviorally-targeted advertising. For more information on our privacy policy, please read here.
6. Nonprofits and local clubs can have an Organizational Account that allows them to post opportunities, but they cannot search for teens or contact teens directly, unless a teen initiates a chat with that organization.
7. Ollie provides tips and resources to remind users how to be safer online and in the community. As on any social media platform, there are risks of misrepresentation, so we encourage teens to always put safety first and to take every precaution when meeting someone in person.
8. Ollie provides information about child labor and tax laws. It is up to parents to help their teen understand and comply with these guidelines. More information can be found here.
9. Ollie maintains Community Standards to guide how our members interact with one another. We strongly encourage members to report any behavior that is not in line with these Community Standards. If you have concerns, do not hesitate to file a report or send us an email at support@ollieopps.com.
